AN UNWELCOME VISITOR.

(On the Bed)

The Sultan of Turkey has presented General Lew Wallace, the American minister, with a beautiful Circassian girl.
Mrs. Wallace was sitting in the front window of her Constantinople house, on the verge of going down to the bazaar for some embroidered stuffs to send home, when a cavalcade drew up before the door, a huge eunuch, arrayed in the Sultan's livery, knocked at the door and salaamed, and then two eunuchs a size smaller brought and deposited upon the inside door-mat a big-eyed, beautiful Circassian girl, whose lustrous orbs and sparkling jewels were but little obscured by the filmy gauze veiling that covered her from head to foot. Mrs. Wallace stared at the girl in dumb amazement.

"What do you want?" she said.
"The girl shooek her head."
"Mustaby, mustaby!" cried Mrs. Wallace, sharply. "What does this mean?" Mustaby came from the floor below where he had been polishing some knives with Bristol brick. He dropped knives and brick when he caught sight of the visitor.

"Ah, ah!" he ejaculated with satisfaction, as he saw the imperial insignia.
"It is a present. His Highness has smiled upon my master and has sent him his choicest slave."

"And what is his choicest slave going to do in this house, I would like to know!" continued Mrs. Wallace, with a vinegary gleam of sarcasm.

"She will bring my master's coffee to him when he wakes in the morning, and affectionately superintend his morning's ablutions."

"She will, she will," remarked Mrs.
Wallace, as she gazed at the girl with hard eyes. "She will affectionately superintend his morning ablutions, will she?" and she stealthily fingered a bric-a-brac cimeter and glared at the offending present.

"Oh, Lewis!" cried his wife, with accentuated horror, "did you ever hear of such a thing?"

Lewis did not look horrified, though he evidently was. He evidently had heard of such things, for there was a doubtful look on his face. He finally said:

"I don't think, Maria, that I would put it out into the street. It's not to blame, you know."

There was a faint snap in Mrs. Wallace's eyes, but she nodded and lured him on further.

"You see it's a present and you can't give away or throw away a present, you know. If we could send it back, saying we had no use for it, or that we had one already, and couldn't he make it something else, it would be the best way.
You have to consult custom and etiquette in these things, you know, dear."

"Y-e-e-s," said Mrs. W., with a sinister sweetness in her compliance.

"Besides," he continued, as he carelessly took hold of the present's hand and began stroking the present's brow in a gentle and fatherly way, "I don't really know if it would be safe to send it back at all. You see these foreign powers are mighty touchy, and I don't know but if I was to send this present back and turn up my nose at it in such a way they might be mad enough to declare war on the United States right off and massacre us all."

"You would, would you?" remarked Mrs. Wallace in a voice like the first rumbling of a rising typhoon. "I fraid to send it back, you are! 'Fraid of international complications are you, you old wretch! Now you can just understand this, sir, and right now. If that present doesn't go back to that old beast that sent it in less than ten minutes I'll show you what kind of a Bulgarian atrocity you're married to. I'll show you," she hissed, as she flew at the present and inaugurated a panic in dry goods and hair pins and Circassian squeals and male protests, and finally hysterics, and General Wallace called a camel and packed the girl off at hot speed.

SOUNDS FROM A RAINBOW.

(Christian Advocate.)

One of the most wonderful discoveries in science that has been made within the last year or two is the fact that a beam of light produces sound. A beam of sunlight is thrown through a lens on a glass vessel that contains lampblack colored silk, or worsted, or other substances. A disk, having slits or openings cut in it, is made to revolve swiftly in this beam of light, so as to cut it up, thus making alternate flashes of light and shadow.
On putting the ear to the glass vessel strange sounds are heard as long as the flashing beam is falling on the vessel.

Recently a more wonderful discovery has been made. The beam of sunlight is made to pass through a prism, so as to produce what is called the solar spectrum or rainbow. The disk is turned, and the color light of the rainbow is made to break through it. Now place the ear to the vessel containing the silk, wool or material. As the colored lights or the spectrum, fall upon it sounds will be given by different parts of the spectrum, and there will be silence in other parts.
For instance, if the vessel contains red worsted and the green light flashes upon it, loud sounds will be given. Only feeble sounds will be heard when the reddish parts of the rainbow fall upon the vessel, and other colors make no sounds at all. Green silk give the best in red light. Every kind of material gives more or less sound in different colors, and utter no sound in others. The discovery is a strange one, and it is thought more wonderful things will come from it.

BLIND BRIDLE.—The American Farmer, in speaking against the use of the blind bridle, says: We know not who invented this instrument of horror, but we know that he did not understand the anatomy and physiology of the eye of a horse. Human vision is binocular—that is we see the same object with both eyes—and so adjust the axis of vision that the object appears single, though seen with both eyes. But the eyes of the horse are placed on the side of the head and the axis of each eye is nearly at right angles with the longitudinal line of the body, so that it is impossible that the same object can be distinctly seen with two eyes.
Now, by binding the eye in the direction in which it was intended in its construction that it should see, it is forced to use an oblique vision, as if we should cover the front of our optics and be compelled to see only by the corner of our eyes. This unnatural and constrained use of the eye must, to a greater or less extent, impair vision, if not entirely destroy it. The object for which the blind bridle is used is not accomplished by it.
A horse is more readily frightened when he cannot see the object of his dread than if he can have a fair view of it. But it is surprising to observe with what tenacity men hold on to an absurd and cruel practice, when a moment's reflection would teach them better. Nineteen out of twenty horses you see in harness have a blind bridle on, and if you ask the owner to explain its benefits, or why he uses it, he will be utterly unable to give a rational answer. We are not surprised that draught horses are subject to diseased eyes—we wonder that they are not all blind.

For many years the public have lost sight of the daughter of Mrs. Surratt, who was hung for complicity in the murder of President Lincoln. A late correspondent of the Cincinnati Commercial thus describes her: "Annie Surratt, the poor girl who suffered so terribly as to make her old while yet young in years, lives near her brother John. She is the wife of Prof. Tonry, who is now the leading chemist of Baltimore. After her mother had been hanged, and her own mental faculties had been shattered by the agonies she had undergone, the innocent girl was ostracized and persecuted to an extent that is a disgrace to our so-called Christian civilization. Years after, when Mr. Tonry—then a government clerk—dared to marry her, he was dismissed from office for the offense. For a time they were very poor, but being turned out of the government grind proved to be the making of him after all.
They are now prosperous enough in a worldly point of view, but the once blithe and beautiful Annie is a wreck, both mentally and physically, with hair as white as the driven snow, though but little more than thirty years of age. She has never recovered from the shock of that awful day, the last of her mother's life, and is subject to fits of extreme nervousness, bordering on delirium."

Let women be brought up to habits of industry and economy and learn to support a husband, and the tramp nuisance will soon cease.
